Call for Papers

Statement of purpose

The Malawi Journal of Education and Development is a peer-reviewed multidisciplinary journal published by the University of Malawi's School of Education, whose major aim is to publish outstanding critical research findings at the frontiers of education and sustainable development. The journal publishes articles that focus on relevant social, economic, political or cultural issues in education which have an impact on sustainable development. Thus, the journal welcomes multidisciplinary articles that integrate different perspectives. MJED therefore particularly focuses on development from the perspective of education. It also focuses on education from the perspective of an analysis of its social-economic, political and cultural implications on sustainable development.

Although MJED has a special focus on the Malawi context, its aim and scope is to include contributors and readers from different countries, across Africa and beyond. The Journal hopes to have this reflected in the variety of topics, approaches and contexts (cultural, socio-economic) in its articles. MJED strives to publish articles written in a clear style, avoiding esoteric jargon, in order to address the needs and interests of the readers of different levels of expertise across disciplines and geographical spread.

This is call for papers to be published month-end of June, 2023.
