The Malawi Journal of Social Science

Editorial Note

The Malawi Journal of Social Science (MJSS) is a publication of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at the University of Malawi. The purpose of the MJSS, which is published twice per year, is to serve as an outlet for publication for both emerging and established scholars in Malawi, within the region and even beyond. The MJSS publishes theoretical, empirical and review articles as well as book reviews in the field of social sciences from scholars, practitioners, and students. Priority social sciences fields for the MJSS include demography, public administration, political and policy sciences, human resources management, social work, sociology, anthropology, psychology, history, economics, and development. The MJSS is very strict with the word length of its publications. The theoretical and empirical articles, including tables and references, shall not be more than 8000 words long. The review articles shall not be more than 4000 words long, while the book reviews shall not be more than 800 words long.

Articles submitted to the MJSS are subjected to a standard double-blind peer review process. The papers are therefore accepted or rejected based on their merit. Results of the review process are normally available within three months of submission. Outcomes of the review process include acceptance, acceptance with minor revisions, acceptance subject to major revisions, and outright rejection. If authors are encouraged to revise and resubmit, there is no guarantee that the same reviewers will review the resubmission or that the revised submission will be accepted.
